Former German ambassador Dr. Ernst-Jörg von Studnitz urges Russia and EU to scrap mutual foreign visa requirements

Posted: 08 Jun 2011 03:12 PM PDT

The issue of visa liberalization will be one of the central topics at the June 9-10 Russia-EU Summit in Nizhny Novgorod, where the two sides are expected to officially launch a recently agreed roadmap towards visa-free travel. After years of difficult discussions, this initiative is a promising sign of progress on this core tenet of EU-Russia relations. Dr.

ABB: A key partner for energy efficiency in Russia

Posted: 09 Jun 2011 03:05 PM PDT

Russia provides ABB with a large market for our various products. ABB is known globally for its work in the energy sector, but in Russia that means much more than just natural resource extraction. Our expertise in a number of areas - from energy infrastructure and electrical grid operations to robotic innovations - makes us well-positioned to contribute to the government's push toward energy efficiency in Russia and to the diversification of the country's economy away from energy exports.

Interior designer Efira sets sights on Russian buildings

Posted: 09 Jun 2011 11:42 AM PDT

During the financial downturn, many businesses across the globe found themselves overextended abroad and proceeded to refocus their work on their primary domestic markets. For smaller enterprises however, the crisis has been an incentive to seek greener pastures and new consumers in developing economies like Russia.
